Observability & Performance: It?s a Match!
06:00 PM - 07:30 PM PST
This month, our speaker is Leandro Melendez, who will be talking about the relationship between observability and performance testing!

Observability and performance testing are often underestimated… but together, they make the perfect pair! In this talk, you'll discover how to combine these two practices to improve both your system's performance and your testing efforts. We'll explore what observability really means, dive into modern performance concepts, and show a live demo so you can see the match in action. You'll walk away with actionable tips and real benefits for QA and your entire team. Expect humor, big hearts, and a lot of tech love. Don't miss it!

Leandro loves to help his colleagues ramp up their observability, QA, and performance practices. He has over 20 years of experience in IT and over 15 years in performance testing, serving multiple S&P 500 customers all over the globe. He is also the author of the performance testing blog Señor Performo (www.srperf.com), where he curates a diverse set of learning materials for performance testers and engineers.
